SUPPLEMENT TO THE

South-Carolina GAZETTE.

NUMB. 1763. THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1769.

LONDON, APRIL 22.

IT is said that some words made use of by a certain popular gentleman of this city in a spirited speech, on a late occasion, have been taken down, with intent, it is imagined, to reconsider them on a more proper opportunity, the result of which deliberation, it is believed by many, may possibly cost that gentleman his liberty for some time.

It is said a certain Rev. gentleman, in a speech he made on Monday, at a meeting at the East end of the town concluded, "That he knew himself to be warm ---very warm---but that he would have the coat on his back dyed red in the blood of his opponents before he would give up the cause."

We hear a certain sett of people who were on a late occasion made mention of at a great meeting, as "the scum of the earth," intend to remonstrate against the epithet, with which they have been branded.

It is now said to be beyond a doubt, that Lord Bute will not return to England, at least during the present century.

Some skilful politicians pretend to say, that a certain great lady will speedily retire to the continent.

We hear that among the merchants which signed the late address, one was a man who blacks shoes, sent by one of his customers, and was paid 2s. 6d. for his trouble, several others were not of much greater consequence.

It is very properly inserted in the papers, that Col. Luttrell, the new made member for Middlesex, has taken (i. e. seized) his seat, for indeed he was not chosen.

A certain speaker has received a very extraordinary anonymous letter about German wives, German mothers, German brothers, and German politics. The remainder of this letter is better to be buried in eternal silence, than to be made public, at this critical juncture of affairs.

Some people, who now affect to be thoroughly attached to the ministry, roar out in every coffee-house at the Westminster end of the town, and loudly censure the Sheriffs of Middlesex for having admitted any votes whatever in favour of Mr. Wilkes. For, say they, "Mr. Wilkes was expressly excepted against in the original writ to the said Sheriffs." But let me whisper a word in the ears of these ministerial gentry: Pray who advised the making an exception in that original writ? Or, do the ministry not know, that an original writ cannot be altered in one single iota, without an express act of parliament for that special purpose? If so, who are then to be censured, who are then to be deemed guilty of h-gh t------n? the ministry who have dared to advise the altering an original writ, without an act of parliament, or the Sheriffs of Middlesex, who paid no respect to such alteration in the said original writ? Verbum sat. Hush, ye pretty warbling choir.

There is, we are informed, an ammunition chest kept, at present, at a certain large house, which contains, at least, ten rounds a man, in order to be ready for a speedy supply in case any disturbance should happen at, or near that place.

A few days since, a lady of great distinction advising lenient measures to be taken towards a popular gentleman, was asked by a great personage, if she knew whom she was, or who talking to? "Yes, (replied she, with some warmth) I know I am the daughter of a *, and you are but the son of a ******."

It was the whisper of this morning, amongst some political connoisseurs at the west end of the town, that in consequence of some spirited negations lately dispatched to a certain northern court, that monarch has absolutely marched no less a body than 30,000 men towards a certain electorate.

Yesterday a cabinet council, said to be on affairs of great importance, was held at St. James's, at which most of the great officers of state assisted.

APRIL 29.

The money remitted from one house in this city to Paris, within six weeks past, actually exceeds 40,000 l.

It is now confidently asserted, that many officers in several departments of government will be speedily discharged, as wholly unnecessary.

The following is a list of the Aldermen, who, on Tuesday last voted for, and against, Mr. Wilkes's being sent for to take upon him the office of Alderman, in consequence of the opinion of the majority of the Council that he was eligible for the office. For sending for Mr. Wilkes; William Beckford, Esq; Sir William Stephenson, Barlow Trecothick, Esq; Brass Crosby, Esq; Richard Peers, Esq; John Kirkman, Esquire. Against sending. Sir Richard Ladbroke, Robert Alsop, Esq; Sir Thomas Rawlinson, Sir Richard Glynn, Baronet, Sir Robert Kite, Knight, Right Honourable Thomas Harley, Sir Henry Bankes, William Nash, Esq; Samuel Plumb, Esq; Brack Kennet, Esquire.

A gentlemen observes, that a late event in Poland shews, how little an army is to be depended on, when party disputes occasion intestine broils, namely, that the Confederates, after taking the town of Peterkad on the 7th instant, met, in their march to Radom, with two regiments of dragoons, in the service of the King of Poland, who surrendered themselves prisoners of war, rather than fight against the Confederates, their countrymen, and pretended patriots.

Wednesday Earl Temple dined with the Earl of Chatham.

As Parliament has given a bounty, by way of encouragement, for raising silk in our colonies, no doubt with the good intention of having it imported here: surely the wisdom of the legislature must know that such bounty will operate very differently from what they expect; for as soon as they make any quantity of silk, they will certainly manufacture it for their own use, to the ruin of our silk weavers.

Yesterday James Townsend, Esq; member for West-Loo in Cornwall, was made free of the city by patrimony.

The toast which is now drank at the patriotic taverns is, "A gracious answer to our humble petition!"

It is said that a great Personage has declared, that unless a certain petition, now depending, is signed by a majority of the whole freeholders, that it will not be regarded, as it cannot be said to be the voice of the county.

We are told that it is an invariable principle of the present administration, to meddle with no connexions on the continent, as the blood and treasures of Great-Britain, have been long prodigiously lavished in fighting the battles of other people.

It is said that it has not only been debated in the P---y C-----l, whether legal notice should be taken of the association of the Bill of Rights; but that a list of twelve persons, who are the most active members in that society, was handed round amongst the debaters, as offenders meriting immediate seizure; but that the proposition had been over-ruled, on the score of being a too unpopular and dangerous step in the present turbulent state of men and things.

It is said that Mr. Wilkes has offered ten shillings in the pound to all his creditors.

Patents are said to be making out for nine new Peerages, five on the other side the water, and four in England.

It is said that every American Governor who has not already a title will speedily be vested with the honour of Knighthood.

By letters from Dunkirk it appears, that the English inhabitants are as warm in a certain cause, as any of their countrymen in this kingdom, Wilkes and Liberty with No. 45, being commonly found every morning in some public places.

MAY 1.

We hear, on Saturday last some freeholders of Middlesex presented a petition to a great assembly, complaining of an undue election for their county; the consideration of which, the above Freeholders report, is postponed till this day se'nnight.

The petition of the freeholders of Middlesex to a great personage, contains a recital of eighteen grievances.

We hear upwards of 800 freeholders had signed the petition on Friday night.

On Saturday the Rev. Dr. Wilson signed the above petition, as did a great number of the freeholders, at the Swan, Westminster-Bridge.

By the last resolution of the court of aldermen, Mr. Wilkes's only recourse is, to apply for a writ of Mandamus from the court of King's-Bench; upon the return of which the legal merits of the case is determinable on solemn argument. If the opinion of the court shall be in favour of the legality of his election, as alderman of the ward of Farringdon without, then of course will be issued a peremptory Mandamus for his being admitted and sworn into that office, on the disobedience to which an attachment issues.

We hear that the Earl of Chatham is so well recovered from his late illness, as to be able to go out in his carriage every day since Wednesday last.

His Majesty's ship the Lively, at Sheerness, is put into commission, and the command of her given to Captain Fanshawe.

The manner of a certain gentleman's death, we hear, was as follows: He discharged a pistol with two balls, which proved ineffectual. He then attempted to cut his throat, but missed his windpipe. Afterwards he thrust himself through with his sword in five different places. All which he survived for seven days, when he expired in great agonies.

MAY 2.

The house of peers, are adjourned to this day se'nnight, and the house of commons to Monday next.

Yesterday forty seven bills received the royal assent, by virtue of a commission granted by his Majesty, amongst which were the following, viz.

The bill for granting to his Majesty a certain sum out of the sinking fund, and for applying a certain sum therein mentioned for the service of the present year.

The bill for applying certain monies therein mentioned for the service of 1769.

The bill for farther encouraging the growth and culture of silk in the American colonies.

The bill for granting to his Majesty 780,000 l. to be raised by way of lottery, for the service of the present year.

The bill to permit, for a limitted time, the free importation of raw hides, and skins from Ireland, and the British plantations in America; for taking off the duties on seal-skins, and granting other duties in lieu thereof.

The friends to a certain popular petition are apprehensive, that an eminent personage in the law, to whose abilities they and their cause are much indebted, will not be able to attend them on presenting the petition, the gout having much afflicted him of late.

Extract of a Letter from Newcastle, April 26.

"Amongst the articles of instructions, which are to be sent from this town to-morrow, to Sir Walter Blackett, Bart. and Matthew Ridley, Esq; representatives of this place, which are signed by the principal gentlemen, tradesmen, and free burgesses, is the following:

"That you preserve inviolate the privileges of parliament, as well as the rights of the electors: That you use your utmost endeavours to prevent the expulsion of any man, who shall appear to you to have been elected by a majority of legal votes: And that, at this time, you exert yourselves in supporting this right to the freeholders of Middlesex."

Letters from Paris, by yesterday's mail, make mention of the plague having broke out, among the galley slaves, in the harbour of Rochfort.

MAY 3.

Yesterday about three hundred gentlemen of the livery of London met at the Half-moon tavern, Cheapside, when Edward Bond, Esq; was chosen chairman. A request for a Common Hall was agreed to, and immediately signed. About 11 o'clock, the chairman, attended by the whole meeting, waited on the Lord Mayor at the Mansion-house, to request his lordship to call as soon as possible, a Common Hall, in order to take the sense of the livery of London, on the measures proper to be pursued by them under the present most alarming situation of affairs. His Lordship received them with great politeness, observed that the request of so respectable a part of the livery of London demanded his most serious attention; and that though there might be no precedent to justify him in complying with this request of the livery; yet as it was a matter of some doubt whether the peculiarity of our present circumstances, would not justify the peculiarity of the measure, his Lordship resolved to take the opinion of the common council on this important point; and declared, that their determination would be of great weight with him; and it is said, that a common council will be summoned for Friday next.

Upon casting up the names on Monday night at the Ship tavern, at Radcliff Cross, it appeared that 1424 freeholders had then signed the petition.

It is conjectured that the reason why a great body adjourned instead of proroguing on Monday, as had been expected, is, that they may be ready to give their assistance in suppressing any tumults which may arise, and which, it is said, have been talked of, in case of a non-compliance with certain requests.

Two gentlemen who expected to be yesterday discharged from confinement, are greatly disappointed by an adjournment instead of a prorogation.

Yesterday morning a number of gentlemen had a long conference with Mr. Wilkes, at the King's-Bench, on business of importance to his cause.

It is reported that doubts have arisen among some of the most respectable friends of Mr. Wilkes, as to the propriety of presenting the much-talked-of petition; and that it is thought by many it will not take place at present.

At the Court of Aldermen yesterday, Sir Matthew Blakiston, Baronet, resigned his gown as Alderman of the ward of Bishopsgate, on account of his ill state of health.

TO THE PRINTER.

SIR,

THAT you might give the public an instance of a heart bent on branding villainy, with its proper degree of infamy, and of giving to plaintive distress its proper regard, embolden me to trouble you with the subsequent lines. The kind caution your taking notice of them will give to the rest of my sex, who are involved in the same circumstances; and that secret check which your publication will give to the wantonness of the person herein branded, will, I trust, be no weak motives to engage you to lay my case before the public.

Know then, ah! know Mr. Printer, I once was happy in the affection of Scotus. If there ever was a Villain he is one; if there ever was a Monster, Scotus is a Monster!---But it is not my intention to inveigh, but to relate. May every virgin learn wisdom, and Scotus acquire honour whilst he reads it.

Scotus is a person of no considerable stature, of great vivacity, polite in his address, and fluent in his speech. If his countenance appears somewhat mean at first sight, his behaviour always gains him friends. He has an openness which persuades every one that he is honest; and he is so free in his confutes of vice, that one would suppose him a miracle of virtue. To these charms my heart became a captive; after Scotus had paid me many a visit, he asked leave to pay his addresses in form, but he asked with so much modesty, that it would have been savage to resist, and cruel to deny him. My consent he obtained: The ardour of his passion, the frequency of his visits, and the charms of his language, I need not describe, but all these were not sufficient to render me happy.

He was dependant on a relation, whose consent was requisite to his making a genteel figure in life. Time was required to matter this point, and I waited with patience, the result of his measures; for Scotus always retained a presence of mind, able to encounter with any accidents, and capable of surmounting any difficulties. However, his affairs took such a happy turn, that it seemed probable for him to make me a settlement suitable to my portion, without any assistance from his relation: An advantageous partnership offered, which would render him independent.

Whilst this was in agitation, I was persuaded to be patient and assured, that its completion should be followed with that of my wishes.

A great many difficulties were started, as Scotus told me, which protracted this affair for some time: Being impatient, I had the curiosity to enquire into the nature of those difficulties which he had hinted at, and found (can you believe me!) that the articles had been signed upwards of two months! When I saw him I chided; he heard me, smiled down my anger, and regained my esteem.

After this, several other difficulties were started, to retard any marriage; a marriage that he had promised me, before witnesses, declared amongst all his acquaintance, and determined by several letters I have now by me. It matters not to be too particular on this head: I shall hasten therefore to my catastrophe.

Scotus being at last left sole master, by his partner's dying, to trade on his own bottom, takes a married man into partnership with him. Some days after executing the writings, he says to me, "My dear, I have a great secret to communicate to you, and if "you reveal it, will never see you more." I promised secrecy; and he proceeded thus, "On such a day, I intend to solemnize "our nuptials, and have got a pretty pair of stone buckles, "which, I hope, you will condescend to wear on the occasion; "To-morrow I will bring them, and will take you with me, to "chuse yourself some silks, or any other odd matter requisite for "the occasion. As for furniture, shall let that alone 'till you "come to my house, and see what is wanting. Indeed I shall "want about Five Hundred Pounds, which I intend to borrow "from my partner: But, as he is averse to our marriage, I have "no other expedient to prevail on him but this; to-morrow I'll "send you a letter, by my man, to which you shall reply, that "I am a villain; that you free me from all engagements, and "set me at liberty to marry whom I please. At the time you "deliver it to the man, bid him to tell his master, he is a villain; "so that if my partner should any ways suspect my veracity, "when I acquaint him of the dissolution of my courtship, the "man's evidence will be sufficient to remove all his scruples, and "I shall have the cash, without any hesitation."

As my affection for Scotus was too great, to give him a denial in any thing wherein his interest was concerned, I eagerly closed with his proposal, and promised to have my letter ready the next day: My compliance, he said, gave him so great a proof of my affection, that he should never forget it; and added, that I should never repent of my compliance.

Our marriage was again introduced into the discourse. He spoke a great many kind things, look'd a thousand tender and kind; and, with reluctance, left me about Twelve at night. This was the last visit he paid me!

The next day, as soon as breakfast was over, I sat down and wrote the answer I had promised. But, as I was thoughtless enough to make a remarkable impression on my countenance, my sisters, by their importunities, extorted the cause from me. They, my witnesses, [illegible] with an unwilling obedience I wrote my soon-to-be tenor; they dissuaded me from it, but in vain. Could I refuse Scotus anything? Had he asked my life, I would have given it him; and at his request, I sacrificed my happiness to him, which was dearer than life!

The messenger came, I delivered the letter with my own hand, and [illegible] all my matter, he was [illegible]. The [illegible] stood surprised, and asked me what [illegible] I repeated again with a louder accent, [illegible] that he understood my words, [illegible] him went my Comfort, my Happiness,

Since that fatal day, I have received none of [illegible] so industrious has he been to merit that title, which he [illegible] me to give him. I have wrote to him: wrote to him with tears: But, in his answers, coldness guided his pen, and perfidy dictated his sentences. He has, by his own hands, signed a resolution never more to renew his courtship; never more to ease my anguish; never more to retrieve his honour!----

Thus have I, through affection, cut that knot, which no soul could have untied: And, through a desire of making Scotus my own for ever, set him at liberty, to be what he now is, for ever another's.

I am,

Mr. Printer's humble Servant,

HONESTUS.

ALL Persons that have any demands against the estate of WILLIAM JOHNSON, late of Charles-Town, deceased, are desired not to fail to bring in their accounts, properly attested, by the first day of August next, by which day, it is expected, that all who are indebted to said estate will make payment to RUTH JOHNSON, Administratrix.
JOSEPH VERRE, Administrator.

NOW SELLING,

At SHERMAN's STORE,

IN TRADD-STREET,

At Eight for One CASH, the remainder of his Stock in Trade, amongst which are the following articles, viz.

SUPERFINE hyson, fine ditto, singlo and good bohea teas, several casks of nails of different sorts, hinges, locks, felling axes, carpenters rules and squares, with many articles in the cutlery branch, broad cloths, silk breeches patterns; very neat linen patterns for gowns, lawn and muslin, black and white mode, shades and bonnets very richly trimmed, silk and stuff petticoats, stocks, blond and minionet lace, livery ditto, men and womens silk hose; very curious spermaceti candles in boxes of 30 lb. or papers of 6 lb. each, fowling pieces, japanned waiters, with many more articles too tedious to enumerate.

N. B. Just arrived in the Beaufain, Captain Curling, a curious collection of ENGLISH BIRDS, which will be disposed of for cash, or exchanged for birds of this province.

AN ACADEMY,

WILL be opened (as soon as a CLASS of SIX YOUNG GENTLEMEN can be formed) for the Instruction of YOUTH in the ENGLISH LANGUAGE, which they will be taught to write grammatically, as well as to read and speak properly; and at the same Time be introduced to an Acquaintance with the best modern as well ancient Authors. They will likewise be initiated in the first Principles of ARITHMETIC, GEOMETRY, GEOGRAPHY, HISTORY, and MORAL PHILOSOPHY.

The Utility of such an Undertaking as this, is too obvious to need any Recommendation. For, however necessary the Acquisition of the Latin and Greek Tongues may be, for THOSE, who are to be bred up in one or other of the learned Professions; yet surely it can be of little Consequence to such as are to spend their Days in rural, mercantile, or mechanical Employments, to pass away six or seven years in the study of the DEAD LANGUAGES. Does the Knowledge of Words, which is indeed the principal Part of a School Education, contribute to make them more useful Members of civil Society? Or, does even a critical Acquaintance with the best classick Writers enable them to discharge with more Propriety, those Relations in which they stand to their Fellow-Creatures? Language is certainly only to be considered as the Means, Knowledge is its End. Now if this End can be obtained, and the Mind can be stored with a Set of useful Ideas, without the dry and tedious Process of learning the Latin and Greek Languages, it may not be altogether an useless Attempt.

Such an Attempt as this, the Subscriber humbly presumes to make; and if he shall be so happy as to meet with Encouragement in THIS PROVINCE, he will endeavour to merit it in the best Manner he can; and at the same Time shall consider himself as highly obliged.

Any Person desirous of being acquainted with the CONDITIONS, or perusing the PLAN OF EDUCATION, may apply to GEORGE SAXBY, Esq: the Reverend Mr. CHARLES MARTYN, or to the Subscriber at Captain Massey's, in Old Church-street. WILLIAM WALTON.
